Table lamps contrast delicate rings of neon light with natural onyx. Voie table lights, from £1,167 each, Sabine Marcelis for Bloc Studios

The pink trend has now crossed over into marble with this pastel onyx design. Tebe tables, price on request, Baxter

The doors of this sideboard are actually made of a high-tech ceramic that perfectly resembles honey-coloured marble. Metropol sideboard, price on request, Paolo Cattelan for Cattelan Italia

These brass and pink onyx washbasins also come in green onyx and brown Emperador marble. Boffi Code washbasins, price on request, Piero Lissoni for Boffi

Marble doesn't get much more glamorous than this oversized dining table in scarlet Rouge du Roi stone. "Love Me, Love Me Not" dining table, £40,000, Michael Anastassiades for Salvatori

PRECIOUS STONES

Nobody does marble like the Italians, and nowhere else are you likely to see quite such exotic colours and patterns on display. This year, brands pushed the envelope in their search for new stones to wow us with – design duo De Allegri and Fogale used huge expanses of amber and black marble for their Mystical Solace installation, while Salvatori's crimson dining table is positively jaw-dropping. Thanks to the trend for millennial pink, rosy onyx also made an appearance at Boffi and Baxter, while Bloc Studios' Voie lights demonstrated one of the most original uses of marble, contrasting blocks of amber onyx with neon.
